

Steel Union Agrees to Delay Strike Call for Sixty Days

PITTSBURGH, July 13—(P)—President Philip Murray of the CIO-United Steelworkers Union today announced that the union's executive board "by unanimous action" has accepted President Truman's proposal for a 60-day delay in a steel strike.

A strike of 500,000 union steelworkers was set for this weekend --on Friday and Saturday midnight.

Murray told a news conference he had no comment on the U. S. Steel Corp.'s refusal to go along with the president's plan. President Truman had asked Murray and six leading steel producers to continue existing contracts for 60 days pending a report from a fact-finding board the president has appointed.

The union leader said he probably would have a statement concerning U. S. Steel following the union's executive board meeting.

Only one of six steel companies--Jones & Laughlin--thus far has accepted the White House proposal.

The president made the same request of U. S. Steel Corp., Republic Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., and Wheeling Steel.

Jones & Laughlin, one of the nation's leading independent producers, immediately wired the president it was agreeable to the 60-day reprieve.

Then U. S. Steel hurled its bombshell. The corporation declared it would have nothing to do with the fact-finding board. It based its objections on the fact that the president had by-passed the Taft-Hartley labor law.

Republic and Bethlehem then chimed in with objections. They echoed U. S. Steel's reasons.

U. S. Steel action added more uncertainty and tension to the mounting steel labor crisis.

It had been believed the steel union would go along with the president's plan. "Big Steel's" rejection, however, made the union position doubtful.

Mr. Truman was reported ready to name a fact-finding board --despite company rejections--if the union agrees to it. This, however, seemed likely only to add confusion to uncertainty.

None of the companies who rejected the plan indicated whether they would continue operations during the 60-day period requested by the president.

Fight on Ill-Fated Airliner Key to Inquiry into Crash

35 Lives Lost In Disaster In California

LOS ANGELES, July 13—(P)—Official sources differed today whether a fight aboard an airliner caused it to crash and explode 30 miles north of here with a loss of 35 lives and injuries to 14.

A C-46 transport operated by Standard Airlines snagged a wingtip yesterday in the Santa Susana Mountains in a fog and exploded on a steep canyonside in what Civil Aeronautics Board inspectors said was the worst non-scheduled flight accident in the nation's history.

James N. Peyton, regional CAB chief, said a brief fight between two men passengers apparently did not cause the crash. He made this statement after talking to survivors. Peyton said the crash occurred an hour and a half after the scrap.

However, Capt. L. R. Powell, chief pilot for Standard, said his investigation convinced him the battle caused the tragedy. He described the pilot of the twin-engine craft, Roy G. White, as highly skilled and careful. White was killed.

Stanley Weiss, airline president, expressed belief that the fight "may have contributed to the crash."

Lausche Commended For War on Gambling

COLUMBUS, July 13—(P)—State representatives backed Gov. Frank J. Lausche yesterday in the chief executive's efforts to close the Mounds Club in Lake County.

The House passed a resolution commending Lausche for serving notice on the Lake County club that he will attempt to prevent what he termed commercial gambling there.

"The legislature of the state of Ohio commends the governor for his forthright stand in stepping forward and causing the eventual end of this place and others like it," the resolution read.

It said the Mounds Club has been known as "a notorious and evil establishment" for the past 15 years. "This place has constantly violated the laws of the state and openly defied all respectable people," said the resolution by Rep. Ed Witmer (D-Stark).

Adjournment Date Set by Senate, but House Still Balks

By REED SMITH

COLUMBUS, July 13—(P)—A record-high $647,000,000 two-year state budget tops the 15-bill calendar in the Ohio Senate today.

Enactment of the measure is needed to give Ohio money to pay old age pensions, salaries of state employees and other operating expenses.

LIQUOR INSPECTION

COLUMBUS, July 13—(P)—The Ohio Senate voted today to remove liquor inspectors from civil service and have them serve at the pleasure of the state liquor director.

Other House-passed measures up in the Senate include bills to equalize property values for tax purposes and to license aircraft.

"Youngstown plan" measures top a 13-bill calendar in the House. They seek to increase state aid to cities and other local governments from $12,000,000 to $18,000,000 a year. The other part of the plan proposes return to the state general fund of $15,000,000 in annual revenues from the in-

Demented Killer Atop Water Tower But Guards Wait

LIMA, July 13—(P)—A Warren murderer, trapped in an escape attempt this morning, scaled a 130-foot water tower at the Lima State Hospital.

He still is there.

Dr. R. E. Bushong, hospital superintendent, said he would wait out the patient, Raymond Jutilla, 35.

Dr. Bushong said Jutilla escaped a small courtyard at 9 A. M. today by scaling a wall crossing a roof and descending a wall on the other side. As guards closed in, he ran to the ladder leading to the top of the tower and climbed the 130 feet in less than two minutes.

Once on top the tower, he was unresponsive to coaxing.

As the temperature soared near 90, the would-be escapee became thirsty, cupped his hands and drew water through an opening in the top of the tower. Dr. Bushong promptly ordered the water level in the tower lowered eight feet.

Dr. Bushong told newsmen: "Jutilla will get either tired, hungry or sleepy and eventually he will come down. We will wait him out."

Dr. Bushong said there was also a possibility of heat prostration or a suicide.

Jutilla has been in and out of the State Hospital three times. He was convicted of first-degree murder Dec. 24, 1935, with a recommendation of mercy, in the rape-slaying of Mrs. Marie Tobin, 25, of Warren.

Dr. Bushong said Jutilla's escape attempt was the third of its type in the history of the hospital. All were caught, he said.

KANSAS CITY, July 13—(P)—Mother Nature has taken care of the southwest's wheat storage problem--by sharply cutting the yield.

Bond Issue and Levy Boost To Be Asked for City Schools

The Washington C. H. Board of Education voted Tuesday night to submit to the voters at the November General Election a $40,000 bond issue and a two-mill boost in the tax levy.

The two-mill levy would be added to the present six-mill levy which is nearing expiration.

The bond issue would be used to finance the construction of additional classrooms while the tax levy would be used solely for operating expenses.

A unanimous vote on the bond issue was the board's answer, at least temporarily, to a housing

President Installed By Lions Club Here

NEW LIONS CLUB PRESIDENT Ambrose Elliott presides over first meeting following installation ceremonies held Tuesday night at the Country Club. Seated at his right is Robert Terhune, deputy district governor from Washington C. H., and D. J. Gibson, past president.

Ambrose Elliott, funeral director here, was installed Tuesday night as the new president of the Washington C. H. Lions Club.

At impressive, yet informal ceremonies, held at the Country Club, Elliott was presented with the gavel by Bob Terhune, deputy district governor for the Lions.

The past president's pin was presented by Elliott to Don J. Gibson, the out-going president. The club presented Gibson with an electric clock.

Duties were enumerated by past officers to the new slate of officers.

The following officers were installed besides Elliott: Walter Rettig, first vice president; Dr. Sam Sauer, second vice president and Richard Rankin, third vice president.

C. L. Musser, secretary; Homer Bireley, treasurer and Ray Warner and Bill Lovell, new members of the board of directors, and A. E. (Hap) Weatherly and Eugene McLean, who have another year to serve on the board, and John Sagar, tail twister, and Harry Thrailkill, Lion tamer.

Installation ceremonies were held following a dinner.

Bob Terhune, who has been in charge of arrangements for the WHS band's trip to New York, said the band would occupy a place in the band line-up immediately behind Norway's delegation. Immediately following the WHS band would be Oklahoma's delegation.

Committees who will serve during the coming year were named at the meeting.

Joe White passed out cigars to announce the birth of a baby girl in his family.

Bill To Permit Quail Hunting Approved by Ohio Legislature

COLUMBUS, July 13—(P)—A measure to put quail on the hunters' "game bird" list now has the Ohio legislature's approval.

The Senate passed the bill 22-7 yesterday, and it goes to Gov. Frank J. Lausche for his signature.

It doesn't permit immediate hunting of "bob white." The measure permits the state to propagate quail for ten years to build up flocks in the state. When the quail population appears adequate, hunters apparently will be allowed to shoot them.

Ohio now protects quail from hunters by listing them as songbirds.

Sen. Clingan Jackson (D-Mahoning) opposed the proposal. He told the Senate the bill was designed "to kill bob white." He asserted sportsmen backed the legislation.

"As soon as a new census is taken (of quail), they will be in here saying hunting license money was used to propagate them and they want to shoot them," Jackson said.

Citing the small quail flocks in the state, Jackson said robins are plentiful and provide about the same amount of meat. "Robin pie is as good as quail on toast," (Please turn to Page Ten)

WHS Principal Is Elevated to Head of System

Board of Education Now Seeks Principal For High School

Stephen Brown, 41, the high school principal here for five years, was picked as new superintendent of the Washington C. H. school system at an executive session of the school board early Wednesday morning.

He takes the place of A. B. Murray who resigned unexpectedly July 7 to take the superintendency of the Bluffton school system.

The board voted unanimously to elevate Brown from the principalship after considering almost a dozen applicants from various parts of Ohio.

He will officially take over his new duties August 1, although he said he plans to start work immediately in outlining a program.

Five-Hour Meeting

The board made its decision following a five-hour meeting, of which the last two hours were in executive session. During the executive session the press was excluded. Brown was notified of his appointment immediately following the session.

Brown will serve under a one-year contract. His salary will be $5,000, with a $300 traveling expense account.

Brown has been in school work for 19 years, of which nine years have been spent as principal--four at Hillsboro and five at Washington C. H.

In his promotion to the superintendency will put him in charge of some 2,000 pupils and the most valuable set of buildings in the community.

Graduate of Adrian

The new superintendent was graduated with an AB degree from Adrian College in Michigan in 1929. After doing special work in education at Wilmington in 1930 and 1931, he received his master of arts in school administration from Miami University in 1940.

He has since done further graduate work at Ohio State University.

Married, he is the father of two children, Stephen, 15 years, and Kathleen, age 12.

Most of his teaching has been in the mathematics field. For nine (Please turn to Page Ten)

Opportunity is where you make it... or something like that.

Anyway, John B. Morton, Jr., has decided to knock on the door far from home and see what happens.

Just out of law school with high honors from the University of Cincinnati, young Mr. Morton is going to Hawaii.

He is now in San Francisco ready to sail on the SS Lurline.

Whether he will go into the practice of his legal profession in the Pacific metropolis of Honolulu is still conjectural.

Right now, his plans call for spending a year there "to see how he likes it" . . . he would have to wait a year to establish residence anyway.

If he likes it, he may stay and become a lawyer. What he will do in the meanwhile, he is leaving up to developments.

Few details were included in the first brief message.

Mrs. Schneider was a native of Muskingum County (Ohio) but had lived in Oregon since 1919.

She visited the Montgomery family here in 1943 and last year, Barton Montgomery, her nephew, visited her in Roseburg.

Mrs. Schneider is survived by her husband and three sons, all of whom live on the Pacific coast.

Funeral services and interment are to be at Roseburg.

tangibles tax on financial institutions. The state now returns the revenues to cities where they are collected.

Senators voted to quit work this Friday and end the 98th general assembly July 29, but the House hasn't agreed. Representatives withheld concurrence in the dates to see whether work can be finished this week.

The Senate finance committee cleared the adjournment picture by approving the $100,000,000 capital improvements measure Tuesday night. That measure and the sundry claims bill are the major money proposals needed to assure adjournment. The House votes Thursday on the $333,000 sundry claims measure.

Capital Punishment

The House Tuesday defeated a proposal to place a plan to end capital punishment in Ohio before voters. Representatives defeated 50-51 a constitutional amendment to outlaw the electric chair. Eighty one votes were needed for adoption.

A ramp session of the House judiciary committee failed in an attempt to report out a bill to let the governor have gambling spots padlocked. A new attempt is looked for later.

ently gained the most favor at this point with the school board for providing emergency classroom units is the Armo Drainage and Metal Products, Inc., which has its general offices in Middletown.

The state sales representative for Armo, Merle Paul, was present at the Tuesday night regular meeting of the board and told them about classroom units which his company sold.

He showed the board figures on construction costs of three two-room steel units in Sylvania. Cost per room was given at $7,087.37.

Paul indicated that this figure would probably be about $6,500 for Washington C. H., with all the equipment included.

He suggested that if the board ordered the units that an architect be employed to see that the units were properly laid out.

Board members also put their stamp of approval on the WHS band trip to New York July 26-31. The band will parade with the Lions in the Lions International Parade and will play in Madison Square Garden.

The production and marketing administration, departmental agency which administers crop production and price support programs, sent telegrams to its state field offices late yesterday stating that quotas were off because of a deterioration in this year's crop.

But Brannan's office said today the secretary, who must settle the matter, had not yet made his decision. Aides concerned, however, that there is little likelihood he will decide to go ahead with quotas.

Brannan is expected to announce his decision after grain markets close today.

week for violating regulations.

A half hour before the crash, Pilot White had radioed Lockheed Airport at Eubank that he wanted police to stand by to arrest one of two men passengers who had been fighting aboard. He said one man was badly beaten. The plane was inbound from New York.

A passenger, Mrs. Mary Bettis of Long Beach, Calif., said she saw the fight. She said she saw a man hit the man next to him.

Stewardess Vicki Zelsdorf said in a Long Beach hospital she owed her life to the tussle. She said she gave up her seat to the man who was struck. The man in that seat was killed. She said the two men had been fighting the day before also.

When Mrs. Zelsdorf saw they were going to crash she threw a blanket across her knees and abdomen. Doctors said this was her maternal instinct to save her unborn child, which they hoped to save. The stewardess was injured seriously.

Early today only 16 of the 35 bodies had been identified. Nineteen remained unidentified.

The Columbus mayor said Lausche, as governor, has adequate laws to stamp out gambling if he knows that it exists.

In recent statements the governor has "not only admitted that he knows gambling exists," Rhodes said, "but has pointedly told exactly where gambling sites are located in the state."

The Nation Today

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—“If” is the big word in where we are heading, up or down.

American economy is still at high speed, but it's sliding down hill. Compare today with a year ago:

Unemployment—almost 4,000,000, about double what it was a year ago; production—running 13 percent less; corporation profits—around 13 percent less; farm income—down 8 percent.

Will it get better? Worse? Will we tumble into a depression?

Some of the top economists can't give a flat “yes” or “no” answer. When you cut through all their big words, the main point is “if.”

They think things will get better—after a little more sliding down—if business, labor, consumers and the government do certain things.

They suggest some remedies and—if the country follows the prescription, then things ought to level off and be all right again.

This was made clear yesterday in two big and important reports by four outstanding economists.

One was by President Truman's three-man council of economic advisers. They work for the government.

The other was by Robert Nathan, hired by the CIO to make a special report on what's happening. When he worked for the government a few years ago, he was one of its most important economists.

The president's council took 125 long-winded pages to state its case. In much tighter prose, Nathan took 50 pages. But when economists handle the language, you have to use tweezers to take it apart.

The president's three-man council said:

“There is considerable possibility that present adjustments will lead, after some further declines this summer, to an increase in production.”

(Things will get worse before they get better, if they get better).

They went on:

“But there is still reason for real concern that the present slack may take a more serious recessionary turn, or not be succeeded by an expansion to satisfactory levels off employment and production.”

(In fact, things may not get better at all, but get much worse).

They continued:

“Consequently, it is necessary to approach the situation with positive and constructive measures, rather than to assume that the recuperative factors at work are adequate in themselves.”

(If we want things to get better, we'd better do something to make them better. Letting nature take its course won't help.)

But to show they're really optimistic, after all, the three-man council says they “find the prospect reassuring.”

Nathan, who gets to his point a lot faster, says that “business will get worse before it gets better seems beyond dispute.”

How much worse? That, Nathan says, is a “moot question.” But he adds:

“There are no firm indications that a major depression is imminent nor that a definite upturn is in prospect within the next few months.”

Then Nathan and the president's economic advisers suggest various medicines for getting us out of the present tail-spin and on most of their recommendations they agree.

Economists are not scientists nor are they perfect prophets. They're men who add two and two to try to get four, and they're not always right, Nathan says.

“Economics is by no means an exact science, but enough is known to permit not only an intelligent diagnosis but also general corrective prescriptions.”

Fans Get Blame For N. L. Defeat

Player Selection Not Best, Claim

By JOE REICHLER
BROOKLYN, July 13—(AP)—Branch Rickey, among many National League writhing under the humiliation of his circuit's latest setback by American League all-stars, 11-7, today laid the blame on the fans' doorstep.

Rickey, head of the Brooklyn Dodgers, in whose Ebbets Field the latest nightmare for the National League took place, said “it seems to me that the nationwide fans' voting idea is not the best one.”

“I may be wrong in that,” he added, “but I am sure of this, however. The manager should not be forced to start with the fans' top selections—and play them for three innings. He should be privileged to start anybody he sees fit and use him as long as he desires.”

Rickey said after the first three amateurish innings, the game was played in a smoother fashion because the managers were running things.

In the sloppily-played first inning the National League infield fell apart and permitted the opposition to score four unearned runs. That eventually was the margin of defeat.

The Nationals got back two runs in their half of the inning when Stan Musial followed Jackie Robinson's double with a home run over the right field screen.

They made it 4-3 in the second and only Ted Williams' sensational backhanded catch of Don Newcombe's fly prevented the Nationals from having a big inning. The Nationals' third inning attack produced two runs and put them in front for the first and only time in the game.

The Americans regained the lead in the fourth, capitalizing on Eddie Joost's freak single which both managers—Billy Southworth of the National and Lou Boudreau—agreed later was the decisive play of the game.

With runners on second and third and two out, Newcombe apparently had Joost fooled on a low outside curve. Joost hit it with the end of his bat and sent a twisting little looper to first. But the ball had “English” on it and it hopped crazily off Gil Hodges' bare right hand and rolled into short right. Both runners scored to put the Americans ahead 6-5.

The Nationals never caught up, although Ralph Kiner later blasted a two-run homer off Philadelphia's Lou Brissie. By that time the Americans had tallied two more on Joe DiMaggio's two run double off Boston's Vern Bickford. They added three more in the seventh against the Cardinals' Howie Pollet to ice the game.

Although happy over the outcome, Boudreau agreed with the majority of the 32,577 fans who paid $79,225.02—all of which goes to the players pension fund—that it was one of the shabbiest played games since the All-Star competition began in 1933. The National League has won only four of the 16 games played.

In all, the Nationals committed five miscues, a record for an All-Star game. The Americans made one. A total of 42 players got in the game, 22 for the Nationals.

Southworth used seven pitchers, Newcombe getting plastered with the defeat. Cincinnati's Ewell Blackwell, St. Louis' Red Munger, Brooklyn's Preacher Roe and New York Yankees' Vic Raschi were the only ones unscathed upon. Each went only one inning, except Raschi, who allowed one hit and walked three in three innings.

Virgil Trucks of Detroit, one of the four American League hurlers, was credited with the victory.

The game was marred by two showers, one of which halted the game for 13 minutes.

The Americans accumulated 13 hits, received five bases on balls and got two more runners on base via errors. The Nationals collected 12 hits, were presented with eight walks and a hit batsman, but left a dozen stranded.

Vo-Ag Teacher Selected Here

Gordon Ryder Named For School Course

Washington C. H. will have a new teacher at the high school in September when the Vo-Ag course once again gets under way.

Abandoned more than 12 years ago, the course will be re-opened in September with Gordon Ryder of Bryan as instructor.

A graduate of the Ohio State University's college of agriculture in 1942, Ryder has taught for two and one-half years as vo-ag instructor at Bryan. He is now working on his master's degree at OSU.

Ryder became instructor here July 1 and has been in Washington C. H. during the weekends preparing his course schedule and meeting next year's students.

A veteran, he is married and has a one-year-old daughter. Besides teaching at Bryan, he also helped give instruction to future teachers of agriculture courses under the veterans' training program.

According to A. B. Murray, who has just resigned as superintendent of the city schools, Ryder was one of three experienced vo-ag teachers recommended to Washington C. H. by the state Department of Education.

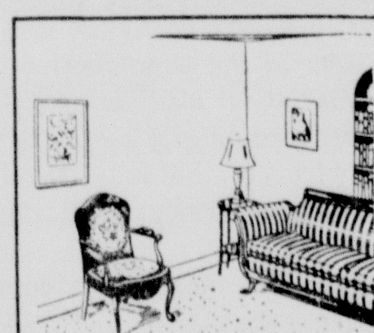

Murray also said that the 1950 semester will have fewer changes in the teaching staffs of the city schools than there have been in the past several years.

The vo-ag course for the high school here was brought back through the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and school officials.

More Than Mere "Slum Clearance" Needed

As a result of recent action by Congress a public housing law, strongly urged by the national administration, appears likely to be in operation soon.

Whether or not the best aims are being achieved by this legislation will depend largely upon what will be done with the organized program.

If the money for public housing does not become another bureaucratic plaything with too much being spent for overhead and not enough to meet the needs of the housing situation, it will prove merely another one of those wasteful, politically juggled affairs in which the expense will be all out of proportion to the good accomplished.

On the other hand the careful expenditure of the vast sum voted by Congress to cover a long period of years, with careful administration, can do much good.

A substantial amount will be assigned to "slum clearance." It would do no good to move families from slums into marginal housing which might then quickly be converted into new slums. Slum clearance is meaningless unless the people involved get better homes where they will have a real chance to raise their level of living, and unless the land involved is put to better use.

Another Moon

How many moons are there? Most of the inhabitants of the earth are blissfully unaware of the existence of more than the one they can see every month. It seems, however, that there are at least thirty in the solar system, of which the latest has just been discovered by Gerard P. Kuiper, an astronomer of the University of Chicago. It is a satellite of the planet Neptune.

The moon gives so much pleasure to people looking for its rising and watching it through its various stages of growth and decline, that the wonder arises what life must be like to inhabitants, if any, of the planet Jupiter. Jupiter has no less than eight moons. What a complicated sky that must create!

Homesick for the African Blue

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK—(AP)—Osa Johnson, the first lady of the jungle, lives on Park Avenue now—and it makes her homesick for the serenity of Africa.

"I like my jungles because I don't have any competition there," she laughed.

"Here you get invited to dinner and right away you start worrying, 'what shall I wear and what will so-and-so wear?'"

"But there I can wear khaki trousers and hunting boots and put my little gun on my shoulder and go out into the jungle and feel I am queen of all I survey. I can look up at the blue sky and feel all Africa is mine."

She said she was going back, too, for one last trek to the land whose wild life was filmed by her explorer husband, Martin Johnson, as she stood guard with a gun. Johnson was killed in a plane crash in California in 1937, and Osa was injured badly.

"I have a secret valley," she said. "I can't tell you where it is. It has never been explored, but Martin and I always vowed we would go back. It's teeming with big game—lions, rhinos, elephants, buffalo—everything. There must be at least a million herd of big game in that valley."

She is planning an expedition consisting of two station wagons, six jeeps with trailers, and a helicopter.

"I can flutter over in the helicopter and tickle the backs of elephants and ostriches. You should see the ostriches fan themselves with their plumes as they run. They make Sally Rand look like a sissy."

"I want to make a full length color film of wild life there. It's never been done."

"Animals in zoos are out of their environment. They lose their color and become wishy-washy. But a wild zebra—he looks like black and white satin, sleek and fat and glossy. And the giraffe—he's a gorgeous bronze. He glimmers in the sun."

Osa has kept busy since her husband's death. She has published nine books and is now writing four more for children, based on the life stories of her own animal pets. She is also completing a cookbook of exotic recipes, preparing for a lecture tour and negotiating a television contract. She has a library of 2,000,000 feet of film taken by her husband on their travels.

Now 55, Osa is still as vivacious and energetic as the day she married Johnson at 16.

"I thought we'd live in Chanute, Kas., and grow a couple of kids and a vegetable garden," she said. "But Martin had an itchy foot. So I went off to the jungle with him, and I fell in love with it, too."

She estimates she has traveled "roughly 1,500,000 miles" in her career.

"We did pretty well for a couple of kids who started from nothing."

Foreign Policy Complications

By George E. Sokolsky

There is to be said for Dean Acheson—and it needs to be said by a critic of some phases of our foreign policy—that he inherited a task difficult almost beyond human compass.

The difficulties arise from three causes:

1. The departure, since 1930, from a guiding tradition which directed prior secretaries of state. These guiding traditions included such policies as the Monroe Doctrine, the open door policy, freedom of the seas, non-entangling alliances, etc. This is not the article to discuss these departures, but only the fact that even prior to World War II our foreign policy had taken a sharp turn.

Older men in the foreign service, or, like myself, out of it but having to deal with it daily, had been trained to recognize certain keystones of policy with the Roosevelt administration discarded altogether. For instance, my own specialty is China. To the study of that country, I have now devoted 32 years of my life, 13 of them actually in that country. I think I have read every treaty and agreement that the Chinese government has ever signed, published or unpublished. I have recently reviewed the list of those in the government who are now dealing with Far Eastern affairs and I find not one distinguished name in the field.

2. The war produced changes in the relationship of nations which make a continuous policy difficult, if not impossible. This is aggravated by the fact that it is altogether impossible for anyone at this moment to appraise these changes and to fit them into a continuing policy.

For instance, Great Britain has been changed from the largest and strongest empire, the custodian of sound currency, the principal operator of the world trade, to a dependent upon the United States for financial aid and military protection.

In the older dispensation, our policy was so closely influenced by the existence of the British empire that the alterations produced by the lessening of British economic and political power are, to borrow a medical metaphor, a psychosomatic shock to us.

The simplest solution, from an American standpoint, would be the restoration at least of British economic power, and it is precisely that view which the state department pursues. But the question must arise, after four years of so-called peace, whether that is possible. Certainly, the shifting of trade routes, the elimination of the pound as the basis of international exchange, the experiments with state socialism, and the insistent separatism of the dominions throw doubt upon Britain's ability to restore herself.

If the United States has to pursue a European policy without regard to Great Britain, it will have to revise all policies.

3. For the whole American history, up to 1939, Russia was a remote factor in our affairs. During the Civil War and in the purchase of Alaska, we came close to Russia. John Hay's "open door policy" was aimed at Russia. Theodore Roosevelt intervened in the Russo-Japanese war and protected Japan at Portsmouth. From 1917 to 1933, we had no formal relations with Soviet Russia.

But today, Russia and the United States are the two leading powers who must either get along together or fight each other. This involves many difficulties, the greatest of which is that Soviet Russia employs methods of contact, or relationship which are different from any with which this or any western country has had any experience. The entire body of international law, painfully developed since Grotius, is abandoned because of Soviet Russia's rejection of accepted forms. Furthermore, Soviet Russia is engaged in formulating a world resolution, actually undermining governments with which she pretends to have friendly relations.

No one in our state department or in the western foreign office has had any experience with the sort of thing Soviet Russia perpetrates as a matter of ordinary business. Therefore, each of our foreign service men, from the secretary of state down, who tries to handle these problems becomes discouraged to a point of hopelessness.

Dean Acheson thus far brought to these problems what might be called an open mind. But he faces the cold fact that few study the problems, and the cost of their continuance is becoming unbearable.

Diet and Health Asthmatic Attacks Can Be Dangerous

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE gasping, wheezing victim of a severe asthmatic attack is not only uncomfortable but is, at times, in actual danger. Hence he must be given prompt treatment, both to relieve the seizure as quickly as possible and to support him while it lasts.

Sedative or quieting drugs will tend to relax the patient and make him more comfortable, but, unfortunately, such patients are particularly susceptible to drug reactions. For this reason neither morphine nor the barbiturates should be used. The combination of chloral hydrate and sodium bromide, given by rectum at intervals of 12 hours, is advised by some physicians.

Lost Fluid

The patient with severe asthma is usually dehydrated. That is, he has lost considerable amounts of fluid from the body, and it is important that this fluid be replaced. It may be given in the form of a sugar solution or a glucose solution injected into a vein. This is allowed to run in slowly. In some cases, salt solution may be added. However, in cases of severe heart disease or heart failure, the salt is not employed.

There is a drug known as aminophylline, which is helpful in asthma. This, too, may be given with the injection of the glucose solution. It has been found that ethyl alcohol also may provide relaxation of spasms of the bronchi or small tubes in the lungs which are responsible for the asthmatic seizure.

The giving of vitamins, such as

(Copyright, 1949, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

C or B-complex, has not been found to be of any benefit.

Breathing Oxygen

Another form of treatment which is helpful is the breathing of oxygen since, in asthma, the patient is unable to expel the air from the lungs as he should; hence not enough air can be taken into the lungs to provide for the body needs. Occasionally a mixture of the gas known as helium and oxygen is given since this mixture can enter the lungs more easily than the oxygen alone.

Another form of treatment which seems to be helpful is the giving of epinephrine by inhalation, that is, by breathing it into the lungs.

If the patient has an infection in the lungs, penicillin or streptomycin may be used in the form of a mist which can be breathed in.

Sometimes the asthmatic patient has thick mucus in the bronchi which can be sucked out, and this, too, aids in relieving the symptoms. Treatment of a severe attack of asthma is complicated and requires much in the way of equipment not available at home. Moreover, constant watchfulness is needed. For these reasons, such patients are best treated in a hospital.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. B.: What are the symptoms of fibrositis?

Answer: Fibrositis is an inflammation of the connective tissue around a muscle as well as the ligaments.

The symptoms consist of pain, usually without fever. As a general rule, the pain becomes less with activity and in this way differs from arthritis, in which activity makes the pain worse.

Estranged Husband Held for Bombing

DAYTON, July 13—(AP)—Mrs. Margaret Blair, 20, was burned yesterday by a homemade bomb which exploded in her car. She reported it was placed there by her estranged husband.

Deputy Sheriff Lewis McCoy said Mrs. Blair suffered first and second degree burns from the explosion. She was reported in fair condition.

McCoy quoted the woman as saying she had gone for a ride with her estranged husband, Lee Blair, 33. She said her husband placed the bomb on the seat while they were parked on a road 12 miles west of Xenia.

Mrs. Blair was knocked from the car by the force of the blast. He suffered only minor burns, deputies said.

Her husband was arrested at his home in Dayton. He is being held in Greene County jail for questioning. No charges were filed.

County Fair Is Given Big Boost By 'Put' Sandles

Board Members Are Guests of Rotarians At Tuesday Luncheon

The Fayette County Fair received a tremendous boost before Rotarians and guests at the club's luncheon at the Country Club Tuesday noon.

The speaker for the day was B. P. (Put) Sandles, a former state fair manager and for 13 years a junior fair manager for the state, at present is in charge of building and organizing a new county fair plant for Clark County at Springfield, and is fair manager there.

Sandles has been practically living a "county fair life" since a small child. He eats, sleeps and lives county fairs. He is the son of the noted "Put" Sandles, deceased, who for a score of years or more was identified with the Ohio State Fair, part of the time being Ohio's secretary of agriculture. He was secretary of the Putnam County Fair in his home community for many years.

George Steen, of the July Rotary program committee, in introducing Sandles and talking briefly about the county fair activities here, declared he believed that the Rotary Club should make an annual event out of a "fair day program" every year as has been done for the past several years.

This idea was seconded by others during the meeting and such a plan may be followed.

Before Sandles was introduced, Steen called upon Ray Brandenburg, president of the fair board, to introduce the other board members present. Brandenburg called out the names of the guests at the speaker's table as follows: George Steen, Secretary Frank Ellis, H. H. Denton, Harold (Dutch) Craig, Walter Sollars, Harry Silcott, Ralph Nisley, Robert Cannon, Baldwin Rice, Carroll Halliday and W. W. Montgomery, the latter being an ex-officio member. Other board members who were unavoidably absent were Sam Marting and Damon Baker.

Brandenburg told what responsibilities each member had and remarked that this fair board was "the hardest working and best organized fair board in Ohio."

This commendation was approved and substantiated by Sandles in his remarks when he arose to speak.

Praises Board Here

Sandles is one of those men who really love a county fair. He was practically reared on a fair-ground according to the statements of some of his friends. He knows all about practically every fair in Ohio and can call most of the county board members in the state by their first names. This gave added weight to his words when he said that Fayette County people could be enthusiastically proud of their fair board members who are doing as good a job in fair activities as any board in the state and far better than most of them. He particularly commended the board for keeping the fair here clean and free of unfair competition. To Fayette County business people, "It is easy for a fair board to take in big money by allowing 'outside order takers' for merchandise to come in to a county fair grounds and reap a harvest during fair week," he said, and then pointed to the fact that the business people of this community had given wonderful support to the fair project here and should be protected.

The speaker amused his hearers with a description of how many "come-on" and other games are worked by certain individuals on the grounds of some county fairs which sell such concessions

Congressmen Get Complaints About Wheat Storage Problem

By CLARENCE J. BROWN

The Senate devoted last week to debating the ratification of the North Atlantic defense pact, which seems certain of approval. Soon after the pact is ratified the President is expected to request an appropriation of one, or one and a half, billion dollars to supply arms and munitions to the friendly nations of Western Europe.

The House last Thursday approved legislation legalizing the business practice of pricing basic commodities F. O. B. the point of delivery. A recent supreme court decision seemingly interpreted present laws to require all sales of goods F. O. B. point of manufacture with purchases assimilating freight charges. The steel, iron and cement industries, especially, have long had "point of delivery" prices for various sections of the country, with the result that processors and fabricators of these basic commodities have often located at a distance from their point of supply, and are still able to compete for national markets.

According to official figures, the price index of food last week dropped to exactly the same average figure as pertained on the last day under the OPA regulations. Inasmuch as it was then often necessary to pay the higher black market prices to get many foods, this means today's food prices are actually lower than under OPA. The natural law of supply and demand is working again.

While the ways and means committee of the House is expected to favorably report legislation making many changes in present social security laws, tax rates and benefits, there is no likelihood it can or will be considered by both the House and Senate at this session of the Congress. Final action on this social security legislation will undoubtedly have to wait until the 1950 session.

Congressional offices are being flooded with calls from individual farmers, farm organizations, and elevator operators for help in finding storage room for the present wheat crop. A great portion of the nation's elevators and wheat storage facilities are still filled with grain from last year's crop which is either under government loan or government ownership. Secretary of Agriculture Brannan is expected to soon order acreage restrictions for the 1950 wheat crop.

President Truman and his advisors estimated the treasury deficit for the fiscal year which ended on last June 30 would be $600 million. The actual deficit for the year as announced by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, was $1 billion 811 million, or over three times more than the president estimated. Unless drastic action is taken to get real economy in the government, the deficit for the present fiscal year is expected to run somewhere between 5 and 10 billion dollars.

In the pre-war year of 1940 direct federal taxes amounted to $5 billion 600 million, while state and local taxes totaled $8 billion 700 million. In the fiscal year just closed direct federal taxes amounted to $39 billion 100 million, and state and local taxes $14 billion 500 million—really a sizeable increase. Including social security taxes and other federal levies, the total "take" of the federal government last year from the American people was approximately 48 billion dollars.

Both Great Britain and France are facing an economic crisis, and British and French officials are insisting the only answer is large new loans or heavily increased grants under the Marshall Plan from the United States. Requests are now being made by European nations that the Economic Recovery Program, financed by the United States, be extended beyond 1952—the year originally set for its ending.

It now appears practically certain the Taft-Hartley act will remain the labor law of the land until at least next year, and probably much longer. While the Senate has passed a bill which would change the name of the Taft-Hartley act, and otherwise slightly amend it, there is little indication it will be approved or even considered in the House. However, if the Senate bill should be approved by the House, the president, who has been demanding outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley act, will undoubtedly veto it, thus leaving the old Taft-Hartley act on the statute books, making it an issue in the 1950 campaign.

Federal credit controls over installment buying expired at midnight June 30, inasmuch as Congress refused to extend the wartime credit control law. The junior group is for children between the ages of eight and 14 inclusive, while the senior classification is for those from 14 to 18 years of age.

The drawings may be on any baseball subject, according to the rules of the contest, and may be done in any medium. The size range is eight inches by 10 inches to 20 inches by 30 inches.

With no entry fees or charges in the contest, the drawings must be either delivered in person or mailed to station WBNS by midnight July 15.

Each contestant may submit as many drawings as he desires, the rules state, and no drawing will be disqualified by technicalities.

Besides the scholarship prizes, first, second and third place ribbons will be awarded in each division and will be placed on display at the art school and the Gallery of Fine Arts. All entries will become the property of the Columbus Art School.

The judges include Governor Frank J. Lausche, state officials and members of the art school.

Both Great Britain and France are facing an economic crisis, and British and French officials are insisting the only answer is large new loans or heavily increased grants under the Marshall Plan from the United States. Requests are now being made by European nations that the Economic Recovery Program, financed by the United States, be extended beyond 1952—the year originally set for its ending.

It now appears practically certain the Taft-Hartley act will remain the labor law of the land until at least next year, and probably much longer. While the Senate has passed a bill which would change the name of the Taft-Hartley act, and otherwise slightly amend it, there is little indication it will be approved or even considered in the House. However, if the Senate bill should be approved by the House, the president, who has been demanding outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley act, will undoubtedly veto it, thus leaving the old Taft-Hartley act on the statute books, making it an issue in the 1950 campaign.

Federal credit controls over installment buying expired at midnight June 30, inasmuch as Congress refused to extend the wartime credit control law. Most business concerns are proceeding to extend installment plan credits on about the same basis as before—another evidence that a free American economy in peace-time can and will function satisfactorily.

girls' singles and mixed doubles. The age limit for the boys is 15 years and for the girls 18 years.

Trophies are to be awarded the winners in each class.

Pierson would make no estimate of the number of entries, but if the play on the courts this summer is any criterion there should be enough for good competition in each class.

The date for the tournament has not yet been definitely set, but it will be some time early next month.

Entries are now being taken. When the deadline for entrance is reached on July 28, the date for the tournament will be set. Fred Pierson, the recreation director said.

Not until all the entries are in and the pairings made, will the duration of the tournament be determined.

The tournament is being sponsored by the Record-Herald in conjunction with the recreation commission. Pierson will handle the details of schedule making and conduct of play.

Present plans call for seven classes so both adults and children can participate.

The classes are: men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles and mixed doubles, boys' singles.

Lawson and Heinz Win In Tuesday Twin Bill

Heinz downed NCR and the Lawson Legion trounced Armbrust Tuesday night at Wilson Field as the feed company won the opener, 10-7, and the legion squad took the nightcap, 13-3.

Using two hurlers in the opener, I. Kelley and Mongold limited NCR to nine hits, while the loser, Matson, held the feed boys to eight safeties, but allowed them to bunch their hits.

Although NCR started with a four-run lead, Heinz came back in the same inning with five tallies and then scored twice more in the second to gain a three-run lead.

NCR then jumped back in the game in the sixth inning as they took the lead, only to have the winners tie the score and then go on to win in an extra frame.

Kelley took credit for the win as he struckout two and walked two, while Mongold walked six. Matson struckout two and walked three in taking the defeat.

Extra-base blows included a double and two triples for Heinz and a home run for NCR. Thompson hit the double and Mongold and Haines slammed the three-baggers, while Hendrichs connected for the round tripper.

The Homer Lawson Legion took advantage of every opportunity in the nightcap as they crossed the plate 13 times on six hits, while Jake Evans held the hapless Armbrust squad to five safeties and three tallies for the win.

After Armbrust took a two-run lead in the first inning when they scored all of their runs, the legion boys ran wild on the base paths in the remaining innings, scoring in every frame except the fifth, to wind up the contest.

Evans struckout six and walked none as his team mates made three errors, while O'Brien, the loser, struckout two and walked nine while his fielders made four bobbles.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN
ONE SUNDAY morning in May, different from other mornings only in the sound of church bells that rose from the southwest corner of the valley where the town lay, Kit, finished with the beds and dishes, changed into one of her best dresses and sought out Marvell. She found him on his knees in the kitchen mending the copper boiler that had given out last night after their tub baths.

Hearing her step, he called without raising his head. "Now that we have got the house to ourselves today, I thought I'd get this job done."

"Look at me," she begged.

He turned around with difficulty, one shoulder caught under the lower pipes. He whistled appreciatively. She was a straight little figure in a yellow smocked dress that did not cover her grimy knees.

"Watch out below!" he said with a grin. She looked down at her scuffed brown shoes.

"I didn't know what I was going to do," she explained.

"Where are you going?"

"Nowhere."

She shifted uncertainly from one foot to the other. This was the one day marked off from the others in the week—hence the dress and the air of expectation. He didn't realize this, she knew, but she sighed, wishing he did.

They should be going off to church this morning to show off that dress, but there wasn't time now, he supposed. He said matter-of-factly, "As soon as I finish here, we'll take our lunch somewhere in a basket. Why don't you go out and spot a place now?"

She nodded. "I guess I'll go up to the big meadow."

The big meadow was seven acres lying to the east of the house. It sloped up to the highest point of their land and standing there Kit could see, over the gray stone wall and the fringe of trees, the thin wavy blue line that was Marvell had told her, where Boston began with the Blue Hills. She walked diagonally across to a thicket of birches. Cut into the thicket was a track, half concealed, made by wagon wheels. She followed it willingly, bending down to avoid the scratching twigs, and came out at a muddy water hole. This was an old unused entrance to an apple orchard that now stretched out before her in full blossom. The dazzling whiteness of the trees against the naked blue sky pressed painfully against her eyeballs. When the first shock of splendor wore off, the single branches with their pink buds ripening into white flower detached themselves from the mass. She wished Marvell were with her. But she would bring some proof back to him that she had found the enchanted spot for lunch. She picked several of the lower branches with difficulty, tugging at their tough stems with her teeth. It was always dull, she had found, to return the same way one came, so she walked out into the dirt road that would take her back to her lane and, if she followed it further, down to the village. It was not empty as it usually was—not more than a dozen feet away stood a white-footed horse on whose back sat a lady in a long green skirt.

Kit shaded her eyes to make sure.

place, all right," said Marvell with a grin.

"Where is your little girl? I found her in my orchard, she..."

Kit came up to them, interrupting the sentence, still carrying the load of apple blossoms. Marvell stared at her. His good humor, faintly tinged with mockery, with which he had greeted Miss Searle was blotted out in sudden fury. All he saw was the torn branches and all he thought of was that interview. He was shaken with the outrage of that memory and his own silence before the accuser.

"Where did you get those?" he demanded angrily.

"From my orchard," Miss Searle replied for her. "You had better scold her for destroying those good Macs."

He had forgotten Miss Searle. "Kit," he began more gently.

But she was angry now. Her eyes blazed. Half in anger, half in self-pity, she stormed, "Nobody told me. There are your old apples," and she flung them down in the direction of Miss Searle's feet. Digging her heels hard in the ground, she stomped off toward the kitchen.

"Kit," said Marvell without raising his voice, "come back here."

Miss Searle tingled with anticipation of a scene. She would have hated to stage one herself, but all the more enjoyed people who could cut loose as they liked.

Kit came back slowly.

"Don't take it out on them. Give them a chance to breathe. Put them in water in the shed where it is cool." Kit gathered them up, her face averted. Marvell turned to Miss Searle. "In the fall, we'll send you some Macs to make up for your loss."

Miss Searle felt she was the one who was being scolded unfairly now. She watched Kit's retreat to the house and then said coldly, "There's no real harm done. I had forgotten that children take to such things naturally."

"Will you come in," he went on, ignoring her last remark, "and see how we have progressed?"

Miss Searle lifted her long skirt carefully over the threshold. The smell of fresh paint was still strong in the center hallway. A small flight of stairs, hardly high enough for a tall person, ascended sharply to the hallway above. In the two rooms on the right and left of the front entry, the proportions were equally low.

Miss Searle looked into the almost empty living room. "You found it very run down, I dare say. The people before you were sickly—they came out for reasons of health, the elevation is seven hundred feet here you know, and they were not equipped to farm at all."

"There is a lot of work to an old place," Marvell agreed, "but it is sound stuff."

Miss Searle walked into the living room. "Very pretty," she extended her approval to its bareness and freshness. She tapped a finger nail against the wall paper, a hideous floral design. "Impossible—why don't you cover it with that Chinese tea paper, the gold ages to silver. My sister has done that with her little farm in New Hampshire."

TB Clinic Here At Health Dept.

Fluoroscope Exam Given To About 30

Approximately 30 persons were present Tuesday at the health department to take part in the bi-monthly TB Clinic run by that department in cooperation with the Mt. Logan Sanatorium.

Under direction of Dr. Damon E. Wetterauer, medical director of the sanatorium, the clinic is run with the assistance of the nurses in the health department.

The clinic lasted nearly four hours Tuesday, with the major portion of the time spent making fluoroscope examinations. Dr. Wetterauer makes the examinations and refers the cases to their private physicians if treatment is suggested.

Patients for the clinic are those either recommended by their own doctors or those who are known to have been in contact with an open case of tuberculosis and are asked to attend by both the department and their doctor.

If Dr. Wetterauer sees anything suspicious, he asks the person to return again for the next clinic. Although no X-rays are given at the clinic, the patients are often asked to go to their private physician for such treatment. All examinations made at the clinic are reported back to the doctor who sent the patient to be fluoroscoped.

The clinic is free of charge and receives funds for its operating expenses from the annual sale of Christmas Seals.

Wiscup was convicted of first degree murder following his trial for the slaying of his step-father January 4. He is to be executed July 25.

The hearing will be before Judge John W. Reck.

Former Employees Meet To Organize New Club

Fifteen former employees of the Washington Milling Company held a picnic at Washington Park Tuesday evening for their first get-together since the organization was disbanded.

Charles Gage was named chairman of the newly-formed group, which will hold a similar meeting from now on as an annual event.

Ohio Quail Hunting

Jackson asserted, "Why not shoot them?" he asked.

Sen. Robert C. Ragan (D-Lucas) said an open season on quail would scatter hunters who now concentrate on certain sections of Ohio. They kill numerous farm animals as a result, he explained.

Sen. Emmett Guthrie (D-Coshocton) and Sen. William H. Deddens (R-Hamilton) supported the measure.

It passed the House March 22 by a vote of 90-33. The proposal appeared dormant in Senate committee until sportsmen and Lt. Gov. George D. Nye of Waverly, revived it.

Sunday School Class Meets

The Sunshine Sunday School Class from Sugar Grove Church is making plans for holding an ice cream social sometime in August at the church.

The group met at the home of Edith Glass Tuesday night. The meeting was presided over by Joy Cockerill. Plans were made to make a sightseeing tour of the Sugar Grove stone quarry sometime in the near future.

Games were played and refreshments served by the host and her sister, Mrs. Joseph Daugherty. Guests present were Mrs. Willard Armbrust and her sons and Mrs. Joseph Daugherty and her sons.

Kansas Wheat Crop

In Oklahoma and Texas, it's the same story. Some temporary government facilities have been used but there is no real storage problem.

In Nebraska, where the harvest is just starting in the far west and northern portions of the state, there has been no storage problem so far. The state considered leasing state-owned airfields for storage but it hasn't been necessary. Around Enid, Okla., an important grain center, lots of grain has been piled in barn driveways, in garages and other farm buildings but most of it is under cover and well protected.

G. E. Blewett of Fort Worth, secretary of the Texas Grain and Feed Dealers Association, says there is less wheat stored on the ground in that state than in 10 years. Many Texas farmers' bins, he says, are not full.

The board of education president, Thomas Christopher, stated the board would take immediate steps to obtain applicants for the principalship of Washington C. H. High School.

Christopher said he planned to contact officials in the school of education at Ohio State University to obtain some applicants.

Five New Members Join Seldon Grange

Five new members joined the Seldon Grange Tuesday evening during a meeting at the Conner Schoolhouse to bring the grange's membership to over 200—the largest membership it has ever had.

New members who were initiated and given the obligation of the five degrees by Ralph Nisley were: Marybelle Shoop, Fred Shoop, Grace Perrill, Anna Perrill and Joe Perrill Davids.

In addition to the members taken into the grange, four persons had their applications for membership accepted. Those who will become members in the near future are: Dorothy McDonald, Barbara McDonald, Matthew McDonald and Matthew McDonald Jr.

Following the induction of new members, the grange discussed its plans for the Fair and talked over its booth display. A report by the Fair committee was given by Dale Wilson.

The Grange Charter was then draped in memory of A. E. Burnett, Jr.

The lecture hour, in charge of Ethel Cavine, consisted of two piano numbers by Madeline Denen and a report of a tour in Wisconsin and Michigan taken by County Agent and Mrs. W. W. Montgomery.

The fair does not get under way until August 27.
